Synopsis

JoeÃ ª knows kung fu. In fact, he loves it more than anything.Ã ª Every single evening,Ã ª Joe walks to his neighborhoodÃ ª kung fuÃ ª studio to practice for hours on end... untilÃ ª the day he arrives to find his studio is closed--permanently. Unperturbed,Ã ª Joe decides to pursue his second-favorite activity--basketball. HeÃ ª joins his school&apos;s team only to find that the players areÃ ª disorganized, timid,Ã ª and lacking in discipline! So, JoeÃ ª uses his experience in martial arts to bring out the best--or beast!--in his teammates byÃ ª assigning eachÃ ª player a particular style of kung fuÃ ª thatÃ ª suits their personalities. ## Customer Reviews

Lauren Johnson is a freelance writer and editor living and working in North Carolina. In her spare time she likes to read, paint, and practice marital arts (like the moves found in this book!). WorkingÃ ª out ofÃ ª Mexico City, passionate comic book fan and artist Eduardo Garcia has lent his talentedÃ ª illustration abilitiesÃ ª to such varied projects as the Spider-Man Family, Flash Gordon, and Speed Racer. HeÃ¢â€šâ€œs currently working on a series of illustrations for an educational publisher while his wife and children look over his shoulder!

My kindergartener loves these books -- the story is engaging and the text is simple enough that he wants to read them himself. It also focuses on team work and working hard, which is another bonus.

I bouth this because my boy students love this series of books!
