The Cookie Moon (Hank The Cowdog)

Synopsis

The Moon is made of... When Hank makes the mistake of asking Drover what he's doing, Drover reveals his observation that the moon looks like a cookie! After some highly scientific discussion and calculations, Hank and Drover agree that the moon is a cookie, not swiss chesse. And, when Loper sets down Sally May's picnic basket, which contains some oatmeal raisin cookies, the plot thickens, and Hank realizes the cookie moon was a sign that he should...you'll never guess what! Hank and Drover end it all by singing a funny song, It Doesn't Make Sense.

Hank and his sidekick, Drover, ponder the improbability of the moon in the evening sky. What keeps it up there? What's it made of? All would make sense if it were a cookie. John Erickson's wry, nasal twang for Hank and his light Texas accent for young Drover propel the boss dog and his pal through a fast-paced series of cookie-related escapades. A lively background of country music enhances the changing scenes. In addition to a list of other available Hank titles, the liner notes include lyrics for the spirited song that ends the session. Puns, wordplay, jokes, and superb characterization make this a hilarious story for listeners of all ages. R.H.H. © AudioFile 2009, Portland, Maine

If you have not ventured into the land of Hank the Cowdog, you MUST! My parents bought us the first book when our first son was born. He has read dozens of books since then. Mom bought us a couple of the CD's for a roadtrip and we all loved them. So, I have bought more. We listen to them all of the time - at home, running errands. These stories are hysterical. My husband and I love them too!

All the Hank the Cowdog books and audio books are hilarious. My children love to hear these stories and we take the audio CDs with us when we go on trips.

Our family has been listening to the Hank series for about 17 years now. We absolutely love most of the stories but I've found the earlier ones are the best. The Cookie Moon was disappointing because John Erickson got in a habit of restating situations again and again -- real overkill. He doesn't do that in earlier stories. It seemed like he didn't have a lot of ideas so he was stretching the time and story until he filled enough for the one CD.

Hank is just wonderful. Our entire family loves these stories - and we have teenagers!!! Must have our own copies - the library has a great selection, but we wanted our own :)

great audiobook.....kids love these stories...even the "big kids" enjoy them.

As usual, another great adventure from Hank and Drover.

anyone who knows Hank will like this story, more of the same (which is a good thing.) bought this for nieces and nephews and they all love it. any Hank books/CDs are appropriate for toddlers on up. i still enjoy the occasional Hank story and im in my 30s now.

love it
